Greek King's Health Better.

King Constantine of Greece is improving, according to dispatches to the legation today, which state that his and planned later to take a long motor najesty's strength is slowly returning and that his temperature has varied only a little from the normal in the last twenty-four hours. The king is yet unable to sit up.

Mr. McLean's Act Appreciated.

A dramatic offering, excellently played, was presented in the bargain scene from "The Merchant of Venice," by R. D. MacLean, the distinguished Shakespearean actor, with the notably competent assistance of John M. Kline and petent assistance of John M. Kline and David Andrada. Mr. MacLean's work was thoroughly up to the standard, which ranks him as one of the best Shylocks the stage has knewn.

The performance opened with a series of moving pictures of scenes attending the departure of the Lusitania on her maiden voyage, giving a complete conception of her magnitude and magnificence as a floating palace.

Listening for his voice till weary,
Weary, for we hear him not.

But rest on, dear father, thy labor is o'en. Thy loving hands shall toll no more; A faithful man, both free and kind; A better man no one could find.
